

CLINICAL COUNSELING, M.A. (ONLINE)

This program is currently accepting applications and will launch in Fall 2025.

Students in the Master of Arts in Clinical Counseling (MACC) online program will identify the distinct professional identities of a Licensed Professional Clinical Counselor (LPCC) or a Licensed Marriage and Family Therapist (LMFT), while learning to view all clinical work through relational and systemic lenses. Students follow a course sequence intentionally designed to maximize their clinical skills as they approach their live practicum experience. In the final year of the program, students gain real-world experience by serving their communities during a supervised practicum as clinical counseling trainees.

The MACC online program is a structured program that allows for flexible pathways toward completion. The MACC online program can be completed in as little as two years and as many as four years of continuous enrollment. Classes are tailored with flexibility in mind and are provided in two formats; asynchronous and synchronous. Asynchronous classes are delivered as weekly modules, in which assignments and online interactions occur before a specific due date. However, students can access the material at their convenience anytime during the week that it is assigned. Synchronous classes meet at a specified time and day, utilizing real-time video platforms that encourage person-to-person interaction to foster collaborative and experiential learning. Although classes meet in the late afternoon and evenings, community practicums may require students to participate during the regular work week, evenings and/or on weekends. Upon graduation the student applies to the Board of Behavioral Sciences to become a registered associate and then continues to accrue the necessary hours of clinical experience in order to sit for the state licensing examination to become a LPCC and/or LMFT.

Program Learning Outcomes

The educational goals of Point Loma Nazarene University's Master of Arts in Clinical Counseling (MACC) are to develop graduate students and clinicians who are:

- competent clinicians and professionals that practice from a wide-range of clinically valuable and research-based approaches;
 - able to cultivate self-awareness and apply professional ethics to the practice of clinical counseling; and,
 - providing services that are respectful of individuals and families as well as the cultural contexts that shape them, particularly focusing on those who are underserved.
1. Demonstrate competent application of theoretical models and research-based clinical interventions to therapeutic work with individuals, couples, groups and/or families.
 2. Develop and apply self-awareness and professional ethics to the practice of clinical counseling.
 3. Demonstrate competence in working with clients from diverse backgrounds, particularly in settings where sociocultural factors influence treatment and there is limited access to care.

Clinical Training

The MACC online program includes the application of theory in direct clinical experience. While enrolled in supervised practicum courses, students have the opportunity to provide direct clinical service to clients in community agencies approved by the school. Although particular site requirements vary, all students will complete 700 total hours of supervised training (300 of which is face-to-face, direct service). Practicum placements must align with the California Board of Behavioral Sciences mandates for practicum and the mandates for practicum in the state in which the site is located. We encourage students to collaborate with the Director of Clinical Training at PLNU and community sites to establish a supervised practicum partnership. Upon successful completion of required coursework, demonstration of clinical proficiency, and approval by the training staff, students will secure a practicum site in the community and complete a 10-12 month traineeship. Student suitability to provide mental health services will be evaluated by the training staff in an on-going manner, and any evidence of concerns (i.e. ethical violations, patterns of personal characteristics and/or behavior that poses risk to the welfare of the client) may lead to remediation or potential dismissal from the program.

Personal Therapy Requirement

Over the course of the program, MACC students are required to receive 20 hours of personal psychotherapy from a licensed clinician in the state in which they are located. Students may complete this requirement in an individual or group setting. Two hours of group therapy or one hour of individual therapy counts as one hour of credit toward the requirement. At least ten of the twenty hours must be individual or group therapy and up to ten hours can be marital or family therapy. This requirement must be completed prior to graduation.

Comprehensive Examination

As a final assessment of competency, each student must pass the Comprehensive Examination, a computerized mock license exam that reflects program coursework and clinical knowledge. This examination is administered during PSY 6197. Passing the Comprehensive Examination is required for graduation.

Program Prerequisites

Prior to beginning this program, the following course requirements must be completed:

- General Psychology
- Abnormal Psychology
- Human Development

An official transcript from an accredited institution is the required documentation.

Transfer Options

Transfer credit is defined as graduate credit earned at another accredited institution. Students may request transfer courses to be considered for application to a degree program. Any transfer courses to be considered for application to a degree program must be recommended by the school dean/department chair with final approval residing with the Vice Provost for Academic Administration. Up to twelve semester units of the program units may be transferred to the degree, and all coursework must have been completed within the last seven years at an accredited institution and may not have been previously used for completion of a graduate degree program.

Although the MACC in-person and online modalities offer the same courses, they are structured differently (i.e., cohort model vs. sequenced courses with flexible completion pathways respectively.) Therefore, students may not take courses that are not in the program to which they have been accepted. For example, students from the PLNU MACC in-person program may not take classes in the MACC online program and MACC online students may not take classes in the in-person format. However, MACC in-person program students may transfer permanently to the MACC online program. MACC online program students may not transfer into the MACC in-person program.

Admission Requirements

Point Loma Nazarene University assesses the Master of Arts in Clinical Counseling (MACC) applicants on the basis of evidence submitted via application documentation. Applications will be processed upon receipt of all required materials. To be admitted into the MACC online program, an applicant must meet these requirements:
